Acculturation refers to the acquisition of a new society's language, customs and values by immigrant individuals (Berry, 1997). The theory posits that family relationships may deteriorate when gaps arise in acculturation between parents and youth (Szapocznik & Kurtines, 1993). Quality of family relationships may decrease when youth readily adopt the new (United States) culture that tends to place high value on youth's individual rights and independence, while parents adhere to the Latino ...
