Text Analyzer - Find the CEFR level of texts from ...

The CEFR organises language proficiency in six levels, A1 to C2, which can be regrouped into three broad levels: Basic User, Independent User and Proficient User, and that can be further subdivided according to the needs of the local context. The levels are defined through 'can-do' descriptors.

The CEFR Levels

The CEFR Common Reference levels are fully defined in a structured set of illustrative 'can-do' descriptors for many different categories. The original descriptors for both the CEFR and European Language Portfolio were based on those developed in a Swiss National Research Project while also drawing on earlier Council of Europe's "threshold levels" specifications.

The CEFR descriptors

There are different types of model texts, with writing tips and interactive exercises that practise the writing skills you need to do well in your studies, to get ahead at work and to communicate in English in your free time. ### English Skills - Writing | British Council

But the CEFR is particularly useful because it applies the same set of levels to all the various sub-skills and areas of competence: the basic four skills (speaking, reading, writing and listening), communicative language (e.g. turn-taking, asking for clarification), types of interaction (e.g. obtaining goods and services, interviewing), and more linguistic skills (e.g. vocabulary range, phonological control).

Introductory Guide to the Common European Framework of ...

Subsequently, the level increases in steps up to C2, which describes effortless language proficiency, regardless of complexity, register, and implicit meanings. The CEFR is based on five skills: listening, reading, conducting conversations (or: spoken interaction), speaking (or: spoken production), and writing.
