Not only do dogs have hundreds of millions of scent receptors as compared our six million, but they also devote approximately 40 times more brain volume to decoding smells than we do. This means that dogs are able to understand scent in a way that's difficult for us to comprehend. A dog's sense of smell can be loosely compared to human sight.

Airborne scent is concentrated near its source, follows the air currents, and becomes more dilute the further it travels. An air scenting SAR dog is especially trained to locate the scent of any human in a specific area and close in on the source of the scent, and can do so from hundreds of metres away, in heavy bush or in the dark.

Using Air Scent Dogs

Using their extraordinary sense of smell, dogs can distinguish an individual scent amongst all the other smells and focus to follow the trail. In our courses, owners/handlers will gain a greater understanding how their dog learns and what motivates them. Dogs love it. They get the chance to work, have fun and use their brain.

If the smoke were the scent from an animal, the dog would have to lift his head to the right level to catch the scent and be able to home in. Where an unshot animal has been tucked in for quite a time, it may be only air scent that is detectable until a dog is almost touching it. A dog that works on air scent such as a pointer or setter with a high head carriage would be better able to detect the scent but a dog working on foot scent or even air scent at a lower level than the scent 'path ...

Air scent disappears more quickly than ground scent. Dogs detect scent molecules in two different ways - sniffing the air for traces of a particular scent, or from sniffing the ground or objects with scent on. Some dogs seem to have a preference for air scenting or ground scenting but all dogs are capable of doing both to some degree or other.
