Explain the boundaries between the teaching role and other professional roles. Professionalism requires us to maintain appropriate standards and fulfil our responsibilities to learners, institutions and colleagues (Francis and Gould, 2009:10). This is achieved by setting professional and personal boundaries which will enable us to be clear about what our limits are and what our professional role involves.

Once a key message is on the board or on PowerPoint, then, the teacher can walk around. There is no need for the notes but the skill to elaborate on the key messages while walking around and prompting students. If a teacher is not comfortable in physically walking around at least the teacher's eyes could do the \"walking around\".
