Political Landscapes is an important contribution to Latin American environmental history." - David Barton Bray, coeditor of The Community Forests of Mexico: Managing for Sustainable Landscapes "Political Landscapes is an excellently researched and meticulously documented environmental and political history of modern Mexico. Christopher R. Boyer's focus on the forests shows us a new way of writing Mexico's history from the Revolution forward.

Political Landscapes: Forests, Conservation, and Community ...

Based on exhaustive research in regional and national archives, most notably the archive of the forest service, Political Landscapes: Forests, Conservation, and Community in Mexico traces the dynamic between government forestry policy designed in Mexico City, and indigenous and mestizo villagers in the states of Chihuahua and Michoacán during the twentieth century. Boyer's thesis is that deforestation in Mexico during the twentieth century was driven by the "politicization" of landscapes.

Christopher R. Boyer. Political Landscapes: Forests ...

Following the 1917 Mexican Revolution inhabitants of the states of Chihuahua and Michoacán received vast tracts of prime timberland as part of Mexico's land redistribution program. Although locals gained possession of the forests, the federal Political Landscapes is an incredible work of scholarship and an energetic example of environmental history's potential. As you read it, you learn about temperate forests and indigenous communities but also about lumber, turpentine, and avocados.

Political Landscapes: Forests, Conservation, and Community ...

Christopher R. Boyer examines this history in "Political Landscapes, " where he argues that the forests in Chihuahua and Michoacán became what he calls "political landscapes"--that is, geographies that become politicized by the interactions between opposing actors--through the effects of backroom deals, nepotism, and political negotiations.

Political landscapes : forests, conservation, and ...

"Political Landscapes seamlessly blends environmental and social history to expose how forest conservation reflected larger social and political processes in twentieth-century Mexico. . . . [It] makes an important contribution to the growing body of literature on Latin American environmental history."

Duke University Press - Political Landscapes

This chapter discusses forest and forest conservation in South and South-East Asia within a comparative perspective. It also discusses the future of political forests wherein reforestation movements will be in constant conflict with commerce and agriculture.
