In 1729, Daniel Turner published his Discourse concerning gleets in which he recounted a number of anecdotal incidents in which the maternal imagination had been imprinted upon the body of a fetus. A woman frightened by a frog gave birth to a baby with 'a fleshy Portraiture of a Frog, growing out its breast' [p.73].

Maternal Impressions | Perceptions of Pregnancy

The phrase "maternal impressions" describes the belief that the fetus can be affected by its mother's desires, fears, experiences. In the first chapter of this book I discuss some of the theories underlying this belief and its ramifications in folklore, science, and literature. Used as a title for my book, however, the phrase "maternal impressions" will, I hope, be read more generally as the impressions of a mother: the impressions others have of mothers, the impressions mothers have ...

Maternal impression, according to a long-discredited medical theory, was a phenomenon that explained the existence of birth defects and congenital disorders. The theory stated that an emotional stimulus experienced by a pregnant woman could influence the development of the fetus. For example, it was sometimes supposed that the mother of the Elephant Man was frightened by an elephant during her pregnancy, thus "imprinting" the memory of the elephant onto the gestating fetus.

Maternal impression - Wikipedia

Every day in 2017, approximately 810 women died from preventable causes related to pregnancy and childbirth. Between 2000 and 2017, the maternal mortality ratio (MMR, number of maternal deaths per 100,000 live births) dropped by about 38% worldwide. 94% of all maternal deaths occur in low and lower middle-income countries.

Maternal impressions refers to the belief that a pregnant woman's experiences are directly imprinted on her unborn child. The theory was popular in the 18th century and earlier and was used to explain birth defects. For example, a child born deaf was due to the mother having been shocked by a loud sound during pregnancy or a child born blind might be due to the mother having looked at a blind person during pregnancy.
