The House On The Moor

As do many of Mrs. Oliphant's novels, the story starts out with the description of a dreary house on a dreary moor and three characters, two of which are as dreary as the house and the moor. A struggle is in progress between the owner of the house, Mr. Scarsdale, and his son, Horace, a struggle that did not just then start, but as we find out later, has been going on for the entire life of the young man.
