What is a differential equation

Differential Equations

A Differential Equation is a n equation with a function and one or more of its derivatives: Example: an equation with the function y and its derivative $\frac{dy}{dx}$. Solving. We solve it when we discover the function y (or set of functions y). There are many "tricks" to solving Differential Equations (if they can be solved!). But first: why? Why Are Differential Equations Useful?

The simplest differential equations are those of the form $y' = f(x)$. For example, consider the differential equation It says that the derivative of some function y is equal to $2x$. To solve the equation means to determine the unknown (the function y) which will turn the equation into an identity upon substitution.

Differential equations. A linear differential equation is a differential equation that is defined by a linear polynomial in the unknown function and its derivatives, that is an equation of the form $y^{(n)} + a_{n-1}(x)y^{(n-1)} + \dots + a_1(x)y' + a_0(x)y = b(x)$, where $a_0, \dots, a_{n-1}$ and b are arbitrary differentiable functions that do not need to be linear, and $y', \dots, y^{(n)}$ are the successive derivatives of the unknown function y of x .

Ordinary differential equation - Wikipedia

Differential equations are very common in physics and mathematics. Without their calculation can not solve many problems (especially in mathematical physics). One of the stages of solutions of differential equations is integration of functions. There are standard methods for the solution of differential equations.
