Combining the concepts of the archetype and the collective unconscious (Jungian) with crucial evidence from the behavioural and biological sciences, Stevens exposes war as an ancient propensity rooted in human psychology - particularly in the psychology and anatomy of the human male. Stevens explains what attracts men to the profession of arms and describes the age-old techniques, still used in military training camps, which are necessary to activate the warrior archetype in the masculine psyche.

Roots of War and Terror: Anthony Stevens: Continuum

Observe that the major wars of history were started by the more controlled economies of the time against the freer ones. For instance, World War I was started by monarchist Germany and Czarist Russia, who dragged in their freer allies. World War II was started by the alliance of Nazi Germany with Soviet Russia and their joint attack on Poland.

Since few wars improve things for both sides, war would be scarce. Future losers would settle on the future winner’s terms, and all would settle to avoid costly wars. Thus a root cause of war lies in the opacity of the future and in the optimistic illusions that this opacity allows. These illusions lead states to fight in false hope of...

Few sentences have helped me so much and so often as the six words from Merton which serve as the title of this book: “The root of war is fear.” In fact, fear is the root cause not only of war but of innumerable damaging structures, bad choices and calamitous actions. One could say, “The root of sin is fear.” Drawing by Thomas Merton.
