People And Plants In Ancient

The evolutionary relationships between plants and people are complex. Peter Raven, one of the most important figures in plant biology and whose work is also featured in this issue (Raven, 2019), determined the term “coevolution” together with colleague Paul R. Ehrlich (Ehrlich & Raven, 1964). Coevolution is the process by which species interact with and respond evolutionarily to each other—a definition that encompasses several relationships between plants and humans.
