The present paper finds a new kind of quaternionic signals whose energy concentration is maximal in both time and frequency under the quaternionic Fourier transform. The new signals are a generalization of the classical prolate spheroidal wave functions to a quaternionic space, which are called the quaternionic prolate spheroidal wave functions.

Abstract: A discrete time series has associated with it an amplitude spectrum which is a periodic function of frequency. This paper investigates the extent to which a time series can be concentrated on a finite index set and also have its spectrum concentrated on a subinterval of the fundamental period of the spectrum. Key to the analysis are certain sequences, called discrete prolate spheroidal sequences, and certain functions of frequency called discrete prolate spheroidal functions.

Abstract| For xed c ; the Prolate Spheroidal Wave Functions (PSWFs) $n; c$ form a basis with remarkable properties for the space of band-limited functions with bandwidth c . They have been largely studied and used after the seminal work of D. Slepian, H. Landau and H. Pollack. Recently,

DLMF: 30 Spheroidal Wave Functions

Spheroidal wave functions are solutions of the Helmholtz equation that are found by writing the equation in spheroidal coordinates and applying the technique of separation of variables, just like the use of spherical coordinates lead to spherical harmonics. They are called oblate spheroidal wave functions if oblate spheroidal coordinates are used and prolate spheroidal wave functions if prolate spheroidal coordinates are used.
