Francis Schaeffer How Should We

Francis Schaeffer charts the course of Western thought, but does so in an evidence-based way. His main thesis is that by shifting its basis of thought from God to man, western society effectively removed the very foundation on which it stands, giving rise to the philosophical devaluation of human life and the constant - and often bloody - swings in political regimes.

How Should We Then Live: The Rise and Decline of Western Thought and Culture is a major Christian cultural and historical documentary film series and book. The book was written by presuppositionalist theologian Francis A. Schaeffer and first published in 1976. The book served as the basis for a series of ten films. Schaeffer narrated and appeared throughout the film series, which was produced by his son Frank Schaeffer and directed by John Gonser. In the film series, Schaeffer attacked the influ

How Should We Then Live? - Wikipedia

Mr. Schaeffer's attacks on the Catholic Church (before he began his walk towards the Catholic Church late in life) fall into a few categories that he repeated frequently in the book "How then should we live?" The themes are: Christians should never have let Greek philosophy into the faith. The Church after Constantine is responsible for the introduction of Greek. Aquinas should never have introduced Aristotle or "reason" into theology ; The materialism of the renaissance Popes is a result of ...
