Garte, Electronic Health Records: Understanding and Using ...

There is an important distinction between an EHR and an electronic medical record (EMR): An EMR is the record that is created and maintained in a single provider's office. The EHR is a comprehensive patient history; it can be based on a doctor's EMRs, but it is the EHR that travels with the patient to all providers involved in that patient's care and that is used by multiple health care organizations.

Understanding Electronic Health Records | The Daily Dose ...

An electronic health record (EHR) is a digital version of a patient's paper chart. EHRs are real-time, patient-centered records that make information available instantly and securely to authorized users. While an EHR does contain the medical and treatment histories of patients, an EHR system is built to go beyond standard clinical data collected in a provider's office and can be inclusive of a broader view of a patient's care.
