Chi-Wai Cheng and Eric Tse *. Department of Medicine, The University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, Hong Kong. Cell cycle progression is tightly controlled by many cell cycle-regulatory proteins that are in turn regulated by a family of cyclin-dependent kinases (CDKs) through protein phosphorylation. The peptidyl-prolyl cis / trans isomerase PIN1 provides a further post-phosphorylation modification and functional regulation of these CDK-phosphorylated proteins.

Seed development is a complex process that requires coordinated integration of many genetic, metabolic, and physiological pathways and environmental cues. Different cell cycle types, such as asymmetric cell division, acytokinetic mitosis, mitotic cell division, and endoreduplication, frequently occur in sequential yet overlapping manner during the development of the embryo and the endosperm ...

Cancer cells are characterized by uncontrolled proliferation, whereas the ability to enter quiescence or dormancy is important for cancer cell survival and disease recurrence. Therefore, understanding the mechanisms regulating cell cycle progression and exit is essential for improving patient outcomes. The MuvB complex of five proteins (LIN9, LIN37, LIN52, RBBP4, and LIN54), also known as LINC (LIN complex), is important for coordinated cell cycle gene expression.

Cell Cycle Control Frontiers In Molecular Biology [EPUB]

The cell-division cycle (CDC) is driven by cyclin-dependent kinases (CDKs). Mathematical models based on molecular networks, as revealed by molecular and genetic studies, have reproduced the oscillatory behavior of CDK activity. Thus, one basic system for representing the CDC is a biochemical oscillator (CDK oscillator). However, genetically clonal cells divide with marked variability in their ...

All dividing cells have to coordinate different steps of the cell cycle, such as DNA replication, chromosome segregation, and cytokinesis. In eukaryotes, cell cycle control has been widely studied and the overall logic is well-understood (Murray and Hunt, 1993). The orderly progression in the eukaryotic cycle relies on a biochemical engine composed of cyclins and cyclin-dependent kinases (CDKs).

On the contrary, plasmids may replicate in a cell cycle independent manner and their replication can be initiated randomly during the cell cycle (Nordström and Dasgupta, 2006). That being said, this last affirmation has been for years subject to debate, as for example, the F and R1 model plasmids supposedly replicate at a particular time during the cell cycle (Zeuthen and Pato, 1971 ...

One mechanism that is of increasing interest as an anti-cancer target is the cell cycle, specifically the cell cycle checkpoints which are commonly defective in cancers. Much of the current research employs these defects to increase the efficacy of conventional chemotherapeutics. Here we present ideas for targeting other checkpoint defects without the use of conventional chemotherapeutics, instead relying on cell damage that accumulates in absence of normal checkpoint controls to provide ...

Long noncoding RNAs (lncRNAs) play crucial roles in various aspects of cellular functions. Recent studies have revealed that lncRNAs are critical players in the immune system by modulating immune cell differentiation and functions, particularly in cancer immunity. Here we systematically summarize how lncRNAs are involved in different processes of the cancer immunity cycle, including immune ...
