A basic rule of thumb for car owners is to have the oil changed every 3,000 miles and have a tune-up every 30,000 miles. Tuning up a Toyota Corolla is a relatively inexpensive maintenance procedure that will save you considerable money if you do it yourself as opposed to bringing it into a shop or the dealer. The tune-up involves replacing a number of basic parts available at your local auto parts supply store and can be done without expert mechanical knowledge.
