At the heart of evidence-based practice is the idea that good decision-making is achieved through critical thinking and drawing on the best available evidence. Evidence-based practice leads to decisions and actions that are more likely to have the desired effect and are less reliant on anecdotes, received wisdom and personal experience – sources that are not trustworthy on their own.

Evidence based practice is often defined as a conscientious, explicit, and judicious use of current best evidence in making decisions about the care of individual patients. Evidence based practice seeks to assess the quality of evidence of the risks and benefits of treatments (including the lack of treatment) that may have a direct impact on clinical decisions made by NHS professionals and patient care.
