The Halflife Of Facts Why

But the problem is not that "facts" change--it is that we are too often offered theories of why things are or happen, and these theories are too often presented as "facts." The pre-Copernican view of the solar system they knew was never a fact--it was an effort to jam all of the known facts into a theory attempting to rationalize all of the facts about the universe that were known at the time.

The half-life of knowledge or half-life of facts is the amount of time that has to elapse before half of the knowledge or facts in a particular area is superseded or shown to be untrue. These coined terms belong to the field of quantitative analysis of science known as scientometrics.. These ideas of half-life applied to different fields differ from the concept of half-life in physics in that ...

Half-life of knowledge - Wikipedia

If we are patient enough, half of a chunk of uranium will break down in 704 million years, like clockwork. This number—704 million years—is a measurable amount of time, and it is known as the half-life of uranium. It turns out that facts, when viewed as a large body of knowledge, are just as predictable.
