Ultimately, I see Florian’s “No Longer Awkward” as a kind of handbook for financial planners, as virtually every advisor will someday need to work with a grieving client, yet few have any experience dealing with such situations. In fact, in my experience acknowledging that grief is something that people must deal with – often over an extended period of time – is difficult for many planners, as we are often eager to move on to the planning steps that follow a tragic event; in fact ...

No Longer Awkward Communicating With Clients Through The ...

Dear Alice, I've been "plagued" with this problem for at least a year now, and it seems to be getting progressively worse. I feel like I have lost the ability to communicate with people. Sure, I can make small talk about the weather and stuff like that, but I feel like I've lost my openness and humor with people. I figure I am changing and learning new things about myself, but
