Due to neurotransmission, billions of neurons are connected chemically. They are sending tons of information to each other on a daily basis. So, we are talking, texting, writing, calling and the list goes on. All of this is happening because of accuracy in neurotransmission at various levels of the brain.

Neurotransmission | What, Functions, Parts, Types ...

Neurotransmission is traditionally mediated through the process of presynaptically released neurotransmitters relaying a signal to a postsynaptic counterpart. For this cell-cell signaling to occur, neurotransmitters must bind to specific cell-surface receptors.
