 Anthropology is the study of humans in comparative
 perspective –
 comparing societies
 and cultures, looking at
 change over time, and
 exploring human
 biological diversity.
 Biological anthropology
 takes this comparative
 approach to exploring
 human evolution and
 adaptation:
 comparisons between
 humans and other
 animals to understand
 human uniqueness and
 biological variation;
 comparisons across
 time to unravel the
 evolutionary history of
 hominins over the last 6–8 million years;

Biological anthropology (also called physical anthropology), then, is an interesting mixture of social studies and biological studies; several other ingredients make it even more fascinating. The two primary concept areas that tend to hold biological anthropology together are human evolution and human biosocial variation; there are many topics that can be studied within these two concept areas.
