Introduction. This book introduces to modern design of large chips. A powerful RISC processor in the range of a SPARC is specified in a hardware description language (HDL), it is developed hierarchically and is finally sent as a gate model to the silicon vendor LSI Logic for production. The resulting processor on a semi-custom gate-array chip with more than 50.000 used gates and an efficiency of up to 40 MIPS is tested on an automatic test equipment and a testboard.
