While the current spotlight is on Lawrence Stroll's investment in Aston Martin, the great British brand has required saving before. Back then, the DB7 model was seen as the rescuer. In the early 1980s, Aston was in trouble. Annual production was thinning and down to a record low of just 30 cars in 1982. That time, it was the petroleum magnate Victor Gauntlett who was the saviour, putting together a consortium to buy Aston, reviving its partnership with both James Bond and Zagato, all
