In 1952, Niebuhr published The Irony of American History, in which he interpreted the meaning of the United States' past. Niebuhr questioned whether a humane, "ironical" interpretation of American history was credible on its own merits, or only in the context of a Christian view of history.

Reinhold Niebuhr - Wikipedia

Niebuhr recognized these flaws in America's outlook, and in writing The Irony of American History he brought attention to what he regarded as the dangers of attempting to remake the world in one's image, to the dangers of thinking that one can know how history should end, and to the dangers of a foreign policy that is too idealistic. In writing this book, and in setting it in the Cold War, Niebuhr turned our attention to three possible "moments" in history: pathos, tragedy, and irony.
