The order of operations is an agreement among people that eases communication. If someone writes an ambiguous expression, such as $3 + 4 \times 5$, then shame on that person for writing an ambiguous expression. If that person meant $(3 + 4) \times 5$, then that's what he should have written. If he meant $3 + (4 \times 5)$, then he should have written that. The order of operations doesn't exist to trick people with ambiguous mathematical expressions; it exists so that people can communicate their ideas more effectively.
