Personality Theory
Explained. Abraham Maslow earned a doctorate in psychology from the University of Wisconsin in 1934. In the early days of his career, he worked with monkeys and noted that they tended to fulfill their needs in specific order of importance. As he observed how those monkeys met their personal needs, Maslow recognized that humans acted in a similar way.

Psychologist Abraham Maslow (1943, 1954) stated that human motivation is based on people seeking fulfillment and change through personal growth. Self-actualized people are those who were fulfilled and doing all they were capable of.

Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs | Simply Psychology

Psychologist Abraham Maslow first developed his famous theory of individual development and motivation in the 1940's. He suggested that human beings have a hierarchy of needs. That is, that all humans act in a way which will address basic needs, before moving on to satisfy other, so-called higher level needs.

Maslow Motivation Theory | the hierarchy of needs

At the time he wrote Motivation and Personality, Maslow believed that only a tiny percentage of the population was self-actualized, but that these few could change the whole culture. Given the impact of the idea on the 1960s counter-culturalists, a generation that has changed the world in its image, you would have to say Maslow was right.

Abraham Maslow - Motivation and Personality - Tom Butler ...

Maslow was practitioner of humanistic psychology. During his lifetime, he published written works such as Motivation and Personality (1954), and Toward a Psychology of Being (1962). He was influenced by brilliant minds of his time, and he was one of the great contributors to the subject that we are familiar with today.
