In Ornamentalism, David Cannadine discusses the British empire's Image abroad and at home. He argues that the Empire was a class-based system intent on preserving the status quo, and that it was largely a net of Class and Feudal ideas held together by an almost Roman set of ideals. I can't say that he fully won me over, but he makes a good argument.

Ornamentalism: How the British Saw their Empire. David Cannadine. The British empire has generally been seen as a racist empire. While not wholly denying this, Cannadine here suggests a different dynamic. The British rulers were motivated not by race but by class - they loathed Indians or Africans no more or less than they loathed the majority of Englishmen, dreaming of an empire based on defence and feudalism.
