Left Brain, Right Brain? Wrong | Psychology Today

In general, people that are mostly analytical thinkers are thought to be "left-brained" and people that are mostly creative thinkers are thought to be "right-brained". Of course in reality, people use much more than half of their brains and no one is limited to only one way of thinking: right-brains can think artistically, left-brains logically. However, these titles can be a helpful way to learn about yourself by defining your skills and learning styles.

Right-Brain-Dominant Learning Styles

But left-brain or right-brain? These are not so well-known. Interestingly however, whether it is our left hemisphere that is more dominant or our right one, the distinction can impact our personality and the decisions we make. For example, left-brain people are more organized and systematic. Right-brain people are more creative and intuitive.

The right brain is subjective and intuitive. The right part of our brain is rather subjective. Instead of making rational and conscious decisions, this part relies on intuition. Our thinking in the right brain is spontaneous and influenced by emotions, such as our mood, or external emotion triggers.
