The spaces in between. As London's King's Cross Square opens at last, Ikeh considers the chequered history of the capital's spaces - and their likely future. Late last month one of London's biggest and most eagerly anticipated public space projects of recent years opened. King's Cross Square was designed by Stanton Williams Architects and replaces the reviled "temporary" corrugated shed that had served as the station's woefully inadequate concourse since the seventies.

The spaces in-between. It's comforting to have a snappy answer or the certainty of knowing not only how it is, but how it happened and precisely what happens next. But sometimes we don't know. And in those moments, we are left with our first principles. To focus on possibility, on the change we seek to make, on showing up as an even better version of the person we hope to be.
