The rights accorded to states under international law imply responsibilities. States are liable for breaches of their obligations, provided that the breach is attributable to the state itself. A state is responsible for direct violations of international law—e.g., the breach of a treaty or the violation of another state's territory. A state also is liable for breaches committed by its internal institutions, however they are defined by its domestic law; by

(p. 8) 3. Global History and the Contribution of the History of International Law. This Handbook is inspired by a global history approach. 34 A related concept is that of a world history. 35 In simplified terms, these schools are the answer of (Western) historians to globalization. Both global and world history reject the 18th- and 19th-century essentialist concepts of a 'universal history'.
