This one is a bit of a wild card. Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat was written for a school in London as a 20 minute "Pop cantata". The use of a children's choir in many productions including the 1999 movie have been used. This musical was originally written for children so many of the solo's are written for a child's vocal range.

I can completely relate. When I choreograph for younger dancers, I can't bring myself to choose songs that are sad, angry, angsty, or talk about adult problems. Those kinds of songs are very popular when it comes to lyrical dance. But when kids are young, they don't need that. I agree with Katy, let's give these kids songs they can relate to.
