When using the Law of Sines to find an unknown angle, you must watch out for the ambiguous case. This occurs when two different triangles could be created using the given information. For example, take a look at this picture: If you are told that , b = 10 in. and c= 6 in, there are two different triangles that match this criteria. As you can see in the picture, either an acute triangle or an obtuse triangle could be created because side c could swing either in or out along the unknown side a.
