The modern style for monograms is pretty straightforward. Even if the typeface has lots of swirls, the letters are generally in a straight or almost straight line, as is the case with my simple charted monogram below: copyright Napa Needlepoint. Earlier monograms were more elaborate, intertwining letters, often so much so that it’s hard to tell whart the letters are. Dover has a book of charted monograms of this type. The monogram below, for William & Mary, is typical of this style:
