Moreover, when it comes to R2P, State sovereignty has completely different meaning. Instead of being a virtue, sovereignty becomes a responsibility of a State to protect their people. ICISS (2001: 13) argues that re-characterisation of sovereignty as a control to sovereignty as responsibility is needed in both internal and external duties. The UN (2014) defines sovereignty as a charge of responsibility that holds states accountable for the welfare of their people and it’s no longer ...

This document, entitled “The Responsibility to Protect: Report of the International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty,” was released in December 2001 and sets out the framework for the responsibility to protect.

The Responsibility to Protect: Report of the International ...
Humanitarian intervention and the R2P both agree on the fact that sovereignty is not absolute. However, the R2P doctrine shifts away from state-centered motivations to the interests of victims by focusing not on the right of states to intervene but on a responsibility to protect populations at risk.

Responsibility to protect - Wikipedia
As a principle, R2P aims to reconcile the two sides. It stresses that state sovereignty includes both rights and responsibilities: a right to govern over a territory, but a responsibility to the population living in that territory. The term Responsibility to Protect comes from a report written in response to Kofi Annan's call.

Because R2P is about sovereignty and inherently couples sovereign responsibility with citizenship, it cannot help the Rohingya or other groups of people whose citizenship is contested. After all, sovereignty does not help the stateless whose membership in the political community is not acknowledged even though leaving stateless people to suffer is morally unacceptable.

It must improve its commitment to R2P and the Integrated Review offers just such an opportunity. What is R2P? In the context of international norms, R2P is still young. The International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty developed R2P largely in response to failure to act in Rwanda, which resulted in up to 1 million deaths.

R2P and the Integrated Review » Wavell Room Short Read
The concept of ‘sovereignty as responsibility’ is without question one of the foundations for the concept of the responsibility to protect (R2P). As United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon observed in 2008, R2P is built on the ‘positive and affirmative concept of sovereignty as responsibility—a concept developed by...

Sovereignty as Responsibility: Building Block for R2P ...
Formally defined by the International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty (ICISS) in 2001, the R2P is ‘premised on the idea that sovereign states not only have the primary responsibility to protect their peoples, they also have a collective extra-territorial responsibility to protect populations from mass atrocities everywhere’ (Nuruzzaman 2013, p.58).

The Responsibility to Protect in the Libyan Intervention ...
Created as a response to humanitarian failures such as the 1994 Rwandan Genocide and the 1995 Srebrenica massacre, this 108-paged guideline attempted to prevent further tragedies by espousing the then revolutionary doctrine of humanitarian intervention based on an international “responsibility to protect” as opposed to the faulty political notion of the “right to intervene”. This global commitment to R2P replaced traditionally state-centered motivations for humanitarian intervention ...
