The solution to a design problem must be communicated through language that is understood by those benefiting from and those delivering the solution. Finally, remember problem solving is not complete until the solution is implemented and tested. Verification is necessary throughout implementation to make sure the solution is not flawed.

Acidic buffer solutions are commonly made from a weak acid and one of its salts - often a sodium salt. A common example would be a mixture of ethanoic acid and sodium ethanoate in solution. In this case, if the solution contained equal molar concentrations of both the acid and the salt, it would have a pH of 4.76.
