I have a 2017 Honda Pilot with less than

20000 miles and I've been having issues with the push start lately. It doesn't seem to recognize that I am stepping on the brake while I push the start button. The brake is so hard even when the car is on accessory mode. Have to try multiple times in order to get the car started.

Fold the wire in half and string the buttons onto the wire starting with the smallest first. Make sure you push the buttons to the fold of the wire so it's as flat as possible. Continue adding buttons until you like the look of the flower. Twist the wire tight under the buttons to hold them firmly in place.
