Little Science, Big Science is a book of collected lectures given by Derek J. De Solla Price, first published in 1963. The book presents the 1962 Brookhaven National Laboratory Pegr am Lectures, a series of lectures dedicated to discussing science and its place in society. Price's goal in the lectures is to outline what it may look like for science to be analysed scientifically, by applying methods of measuring, hypothesizing, and deriving to science itself. With this goal in mind, he sets out to

Whilst big ideas help to frame the ultimate goals of science education, it’s important to recognise that big ideas cannot be taught directly. This sounds a bit odd, but just as we can’t teach students to be ‘problem solvers’, we can teach them a body of knowledge that enables them to solve problems in a specific domain.
