Postmodernism Or The Cultural Logic
 Jameson's book stands out as one of two major original contributions to the analysis of postmodernism (the other being David Harvey's Postmodern Condition).

Sympathetic to Marxism, Jameson draws on Ernest Mandel's notion of late capitalism to suggest that postmodernism is the cultural logic of a distinct phase of capitalism.

Postmodernism: Or, the Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism ...

Postmodernism, or, the Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism is a 1991 book by Fredric Jameson, in which the author offers a critique of modernism and postmodernism from a Marxist perspective. The book began as a 1984 article in the New Left Review. For Jameson, postmodernism is a forced but highly permeating field, given that cultures are formed through mass media ("mass culture

begins with a simple

premise: we no longer live in the world of "postmodernism," famously dubbed "the cultural logic of late capitalism" by Fredric Jameson in 1984. Far from charting any simple move "beyond" postmodernism since the 1980s, though, this book argues that we've experienced an intensification of postmodern capitalism over the past decades, an increasing saturation of the economic sphere into formerly independent segments of everyday cultural life.

Postmodernism, or, the Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism is a 1991 work of critical theory by Marxist cultural and political theorist Fredric Jameson. Limiting his conception of "postmodernity" to the late capitalist ideologies and practices that evolved in the latter half of the twentieth century, Jameson argues that the postmodern era is neither a clean break from, nor a smooth continuation of, modernity.

Jameson brings to the subject an immense range of reference both to artworks and to theoretical discussions; a strong hypothesis linking cultural changes to changes in the place of culture within the whole structure of life produced by a new phase of economic history (multinational capitalism); and a severely scholarly wish to analyze and understand, rather than praise or blame, the object of his study."

Postmodernism, or The Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism. The last few years have been marked by an inverted millennarianism, in which premonitions of the future, catastrophic or redemptive, have been replaced by senses of the end of this or that (the end of ideology, art, or social class; the 'crisis' of Leninism, social democracy, or the welfare state, etc., etc.): taken together, all of these perhaps constitute what is increasingly called postmodernism.

old, the older, the archaic, still subsist; culture can still do something to that nature and work at transforming that "referent."

Postmodernism is what you have when the modernization process is complete and nature is gone for good. It is a more fully human world than the older one, but one in which "culture" has become a veritable "second nature."

Postmodernism, or, The cultural logic of late capitalism ...

Whereas "modernism was still minimally and tendentially the critique of the commodity and the effort to make it transcend itself," postmodernism "is the consumption of sheer commodification as a process" (x). That apparent victory of commodification over all spheres of life marks postmodernity's reliance on the "cultural logic of late capitalism."

Fredric Jameson

In his most wide-ranging and accessible work, Frederic Jameson argues that postmodernism is the cultural response to the latest systemic change in world capitalism. He seeks here to crystallize a definition of a term which has taken on so many meanings that it has virtually lost all historical significance.
