Landscapes and Geomorphology: A Very Short Introduction ...

The structure of Landscapes and Geomorphology is entirely logical, starting with the familiar and historical perspectives, examining the influence of tectonics and climate, seeing the interactions between landscapes and man from more than one perspective, and finally discussing the exotic—the deep ocean floor, Mars and Titan. All this is crammed, in the best possible way, in only about 125 pages of text.

Geomorphology is the scientific study of the origin and evolution of topographic and bathymetric features created by physical, chemical or biological processes operating at or near the Earth's surface.

Geomorphologists seek to understand why landscapes look the way they do, to understand landform history and dynamics and to predict changes through a combination of field observations, physical experiments and numerical modeling.

Geomorphologists work within disciplines such as physical geography,
