Using as his source French fashion magazines from 1958 and 1959, Barthes "reads" clothing to determine its system of meaning. "The magazine as a machine that makes fashion" (51) is indisputable now (and was it ever in doubt by those in the industry?), but in 1967 when this book was first published it had the whiff of revolution about it.

THE FASHION SYSTEM. by Roland Barthes translated by Richard Howard · RELEASE DATE: July 14, 1983. In Mythologies, Barthes hinted that fashion magazines might provide a ready field for semiological analysis. In The Fashion System (published in France in 1967), he appears at his semantical worst—and, ultimately, some of his perceptive best—analyzing the written fashion descriptions in Elle and Le Jardin des Modes, instead of their visual presentation, because "it is not the object but ...

The sign of fashion is the fashion writing itself, which, as Barthes says, ‘is “tautological”, since fashion is only ever the fashionable garment’ (Barthes 1993: 220n.16). In the third section of The Fashion System, Barthes examines the rhetorical system of fashion. This system captures ‘the entirety of the clothing code’.

Key Theories of Roland Barthes | Literary Theory and Criticism

His first book on the subject, published in 1967, is titled The Fashion System. Here, Barthes analyses the flowery, descriptive language in fashion magazines Elle and Le Jardin des Modes, instead of the images printed in such publications, stating that: “it is not the object but the name that creates desire; it is not the dream but the meaning that sells”. Here, we present ten further quotes excerpted from its pages.
